

Ruidoso Downs Short History

In 1947, the first race was run at Ruidoso Downs (known as Hollywood Park until 1953). The facility was a far cry from the grand site seen off Highway 70 today. The open meadow on which a 7 Furlong oval and separate 550 Yard Quarter Horse track now stands was once a quaint gathering place for locales to hold match races. It would take hours to set up a race and local men would volunteer to judge the finish. The track was nothing more than a tilled road with a considerable uphill tilt. Slowly, the track began to grow accommodating crowds of fans escaping the summer heat in the cool mountains. In 1982, a major expansion to the grandstand's Turf Club and backside increased the track's previously strained capacity problems. The new structure spanned 125 feet further east and 135 feet wider. The paddock and jockeys quarters were relocated to the infield and new barns upgraded backside conditions and provided 432 new stalls. With the expansion, came better racing.

The Birth of the All American Futurity

Stories of rags to riches in today's modern society are few and far between. Here in the tall, cool, pines of Ruidoso though, it happens every year. It began in 1959 when a shy two-year old filly named Galobar entered the gates at Ruidoso Downs. Twenty some odd seconds later, she made history by becoming the first All American Futurity winner. Total purse for the race was $129,686.85.

" I guess this is a thrill that just comes once in a lifetime," expresses the out of breath owner Hugh Huntley. Little did he know that two years later, and two years after that, he would once again revisit the winner's circle on Labor Day at Ruidoso Downs.

In the years to follow, Ruidoso Downs summer climate and world class racing proved fruitful for its marquee Labor Day race. 1972 marked the beginning of a new era when the combined purse reached over a million dollars, with the winner taking home roughly a third. It would not be until ten years later in 1982 that the winning connections of the All American Futurity would become instant millionaires when the total purse reached well over two million dollars. Over the next eighteen years, the notoriety and fame associated with instant millions grew the race into what it is today; a showcase of the who's who and more importantly, who's fastest in the world of American Quarter Horse racing. For some, winning the All American Futurity has become a profession. Trainer, Jack Brooks has become an expert at having win photos taken after seven trips to the winner's circle and no other jockey knows every step of the race better than six-time winning rider, Jack Martin.

The New Era

On May 5, 1999 Ruidoso Downs Race Track entered a new era when the Billy the Kid Casino opened it's doors to the public. The casino not only attracts new visitors to the track, but also helps racing by paying back 20% to increase purses. The facility which stands adjacent to the grandstand of the track offers a slice of Vegas with more than 300 slot machines, All-You-Can-Eat Buffet, Grille and Bar, Coffee Shop, Gift Shop, and satellite wagering venue. Modeled after Billy the Kid's Historic Lincoln located 30 miles northeast of town, the interior captures life as it was in the old west.

Teller Cartel Overcomes the Elements in All American Futurity Win

Teller Cartel broke smartly from the gate and held on at the wire to become a surprise winner of the $2 million All American Futurity today at Ruidoso Downs Race Track and Casino.

"All that I needed to do was hang on," jockey Cody Jenson said in the winner's circle. "The colt did it all by himself. I never saw any other horses until we got close to the wire."

Teller Cartel paid a whopping $37.80 to win, $17.20 to place and $7.60 to show before a Ruidoso Downs Race Track record crowd of 18,112. He covered the 440-yard course in 21.50 seconds.

The colt is owned by a syndicate group put together by Butch Wise and trained by Paul Jones, who leads the nation in quarter horse victories and stakes wins this year. It is the first All American Futurity victory for all parties.

"I'm so excited for everyone associated with Teller Cartel," Jones said. "He has been so easy to train and the horse has made so many people happy today. It's a dream-come-true for all of us to win the All American."

Jones said the colt is expected to be shipped to California's Los Alamitos Race Course shortly, where he is nominated for some upcoming stakes events in the fall.

Ruidoso Downs Race Track has completed its summer racing schedule and will reopen Memorial Day weekend of 2006. Sister track Zia Park in Hobbs will open for quarter horse and thoroughbred racing on September 23.
